The year 2012 – the heart of time in 26,000 years

2012 is the year wherein the earth rounds off a celestial cycle of 26,000 years and on the 21st December 2012 the Earth, Sun and the heart of the Milky Way will stand in line with each other. Never, since the beginning of human written history, has this occurred, but it has in one way or another been anticipated, as seen on calendars that are thousands of years old from civilizations all around the world. We are living in a very unique period of time!

Astrological and transforming aspects between planets take place in 2012 that only occur every 248 years and will strike right at the heart of the world's political and financial structures.

On Saturday 21st January 2012 three well-known astrologers will each give a short talk shining the spotlight on the most explicit developments in the economy and the world in 2012. After the break the well-known American financial astrologer Raymond Merriman will take this theme deeper and show what we can expect in social and political scenes, in the economy and on the financial markets in 2012.
